

A Brief History of Selling Ideas

PART 1 — THE OLD WAY

TITLE OVER BLACK: A Brief History of Selling Ideas

VISUAL: Open on Times Square. Camera BOOMS UP the face of an 80th-floor office building. Inside, rows of frantic executives type furiously. Cigarette smoke hangs in the air. A man leaps to his feet holding a script above his head. Equal parts fear and triumph.

VO: Once upon a time, making something great meant... guessing.

VISUAL: Rapid cuts. Script changes hands. Elevator UP button pressed. Dark boardroom. Massive executive slams a stamp. FAIL. Exterior a man is thrown out a window.

VO: Months of writing. Rewriting. Pitching. Waiting. More waiting.

VISUAL: Rapid cuts. A new man is dumped into an empty seat. A hand shoots up with a new script. Feet walking down a hall. Giant rubber stamp hits paper. APPROVED.

VO: Then boards. Notes. New boards. Different notes. Same notes.

VISUAL: elevator DOWN button. Artist furiously draw storyboards. elevator UP button. Giant rubber stamp hits paper. APPROVED. A giant check is signed. Millions are committed.

VO: An idea is approved. Millions committed. Still no one's seen it.

VISUAL: Clapperboard snaps. Sets constructed. Crew scrambling. Chaos energy.

VO: Production begins.

VISUAL: Martini glasses clink. Exhausted smiles.

VO: Production wraps.

VISUAL: Boardroom gathered around an old square TV. Dramatic pause as screen flickers on.

VO: And finally... the first real version.

CUT TO BLACK

VO: And sometimes... it's not what anyone pictured.

VISUAL: Silence. Faces freeze. Someone is thrown out the window.

VO: Sometimes? Magic.

VISUAL: Smash cut to family watching TV. They jump up and run out of the house. Cars pull up to a store parking lot. Cars leave loaded with product

TRANSITION

TITLE or VO? A lot has changed since the good old days.

TITLE or VO? But we still sell ideas the same way.

TITLE or VO? What if you could actually see the idea... before you make it?

TITLE or VO? What if changing one thing didn't mean starting over?

TITLE or VO? What if the best idea won — not just the safest one?

PART 2 — THE NEW WAY

VISUAL: Camera BOOMS UP Times Square again. This time into a warm apartment window. Young creative sits cross-legged with laptop. Calm. Cat in lap.

VO: What if every revision came to life instantly?

VISUAL: On laptop screen, script text auto-transforms into rough storyboard frames on a timeline.

VO: Try this.

VISUAL: Character on screen transforms into a squirrel. Creative bursts out laughing.

VO: No more imagining. Just reacting.

VISUAL: Split screen. Remote collaborator types notes. Change happens in real time.

VO: If it doesn't work? You'll know fast.

VISUAL: Rapid iterations. Character cycles through different looks, styles, tones.

VO: So you can try again. And again. And again.

VISUAL: Cut to relaxed boardroom. Pizza boxes. Screen plays polished animatic version. Confident nods.

VO: When you finally hit 'approve'... you mean it.

VISUAL: Transition seamlessly from animatic to real production set that matches storyboard exactly.

VO: Better ideas. Fewer heart attacks.

VISUAL: Return to exterior of office building. Window cleaner drops dramatically two inches. Calmly continues cleaning.

VO: Stop guessing. Start seeing.